Thirty-fifth Annual Report

—of the—

Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity

For the Year Ending
September 14, 1913

A Generation of Charitable Service

Central office
CHARITIES BUILDING
419 SOUTH FIFTEENTH STREET

How to Use the Society

To refer a case of need to the Society communicate in person or by telephone or by mail with the nearest district office (see page 30) or with the Central Office, Charities Building, 419 S. Fifteenth Street, which is open from 9 to 5.30. Urgent need outside of office hours may be referred to Wayfarers' Lodge No. 1, 1720 Lombard Street.

If more permanent help is needed we shall be glad to bring the family into touch with whatever charitable, medical or other service is necessary as a preliminary to self-support, following out a plan of helpfulness until the desired result is reached.

Homeless men should be referred to one of our two Lodges. No card is necessary and no charge except three hours' work in the woodyard is made.

The Society's workers are at the service of those who wish to confer with them about charitable problems. They may be consulted at the central and district offices during the office hours or by appointment.

A Year's Work

September 15, 1912, to September 14, 1913

From the poor themselves, from charitable organizations and individuals last year we received appeals in behalf of

7,710 Families

11,925 Homeless Men, Women and Children

Some of the services we rendered them were as follows :

Permanent employment	231
Temporary jobs	158
Legal, medical and other professional aid to	1,346
Other friendly services	1,345
Meals worked for at Lodges	88,063
Lodgings worked for at Lodges	36,720
Loans	$291.30
Material relief to families*	$19,389.91

Our relief came from the following sources :

From our own funds	$ 3,745.68
Procured from Relatives	2,596.56
Procured from Former Employers	1,891.62
Procured from Other Friends	550.98
Procured from Charitable Individuals and Churches	5,932.50
Procured through Committee on Special Relief	4,672.57
	4,672.57
	$19,389.91

In doing this work we used a staff of skilled workers and volunteers and co-operated with a wide group of the city's charities. This work involved

62,647 Visits to the poor

* No relief is counted unless we administer the funds ourselves, and unless, in addition, we are assured that the same amount is not counted again in any other charity's statement.

Annual Meeting

The Thirty-fifth Annual Meeting of the Society was held in the Assembly Hall of the Church House, Twelfth and Walnut Streets, on Tuesday afternoon, November 25, 1913. The president, John S. Newbold, presided.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Summaries of the financial reports and of the year's work were read and referred to the incoming board for publication.

Howard W. Lippincott, for the Nominating Committee, recommended the election of the following as Directors for three years: Miss Constance Biddle, Mrs. Richard H. Harte, Miss Elizabeth B. Kirkbride, Henry H. Collins, Rev. George H. Ferris, John Story Jenks, Henry Tatnall, Joseph M. Steele, and Frank Graham Thomson. On motion, the secretary was instructed to cast one ballot and the election was declared unanimous.

After a short informal talk by the General Secretary, R. M. Little, the meeting adjourned at 4.45 P. M.

MINUTE

Charles Chauncey Binney

To say that private sorrow may be tinged by such a high sense of gratification in the standards of a life which has passed from human sight as to irradiate grief with joy, is perhaps to jar with a seeming paradox the deep personal sadness of those nearest and dearest to the departed. Yet in the fullest record of one who has fought the fight and kept the faith, some such feeling must find expression. This Society, in recording its bereavement over the death of its late director, Charles Chauncey Binney, must, in its final tribute, emphasize the obligation of that happiness which is the crown and glory of all memory which throbs with a part of noble striving for the welfare of others and the strong accomplishment of its labors.

This minute might well deal with his legal learning, which he was always ready to place at our disposal; with his conscientious attendance upon meetings (frequently in his last year with us at the expense of his health); with his keen interest in the problems of organized charity. But we prefer to dwell on the thought of the general happiness which the memory of his high-moving life leaves for those who remain to continue the struggle in which he bore so brave a part.

HISTORICAL NOTE

For thirty-five years the Society for Organizing Charity has served Philadelphia, striving to make its benevolent spirit effective against poverty and social misery. The Society was organized in the belief that the forces which make life worth while are stronger than those which degrade human character, and that it is the privilege of society to discover and apply the constructive principles and methods of life which will produce health, wealth, knowledge, happiness, beauty and righteousness for all people. The goal of our Christian civilization must be economic justice and social righteousness. If this belief is rightly grounded, some progress towards the goal should have been made in Philadelphia during the past thirty-five years. A survey of the Society's work indicates a substantial measure of progress in many directions. We are far from the goal, and our ideals seem as distant as when the work began, but real achievements have been made.

A Generation Ago

This is apparent when we recall the social conditions of the city a generation ago. Then, the population was but little more than a third of what it is now; yet there were 86 relief societies, 79 various forms of medical charities and 81 homes ministering to the needy, besides the Almshouse, asylums and reformatories. In addition, the Guardians of the Poor were expending an average of $70,000 each year in public outdoor relief. But, with all these agencies and efforts at work, the Almshouse was crowded, mendicants swarmed on the streets, and the various private charities were burdened beyond their strength. They were all working independent of each other. There was much duplication of effort, imposition was practiced on a broad scale, and the benevolent spirit was actually creating paupers instead of solving the problem of poverty. Indiscriminate giving was a prevailing habit, almsgiving being synonymous with charity. The conditions were so chaotic as to be called, "The Anarchy of Charity."

Modern Charity

The modern charity movement reached America in 1877, when a society was organized in Buffalo. The Philadelphia Society, organized two years later, was modeled after the London Charity Organization Society, the city being districted by wards, each ward having its own board and committees, and these all being subordinate to the General Board. The movement began auspiciously. It was welcomed by most of the existing charities, and benevolent citizens joined the Society in great numbers. They gave freely of both their time and money to advance the cause. Leading citizens were members of the Central and Ward Boards; many public meetings were held throughout the city, and the principles and methods of the organized charity movement were explained by the pulpit and the press. Much was expected of the new Society. Public outdoor relief, which had been the cause of scandal for years, was abolished in 1879. In the first year, 8419 families came under the care of the new organization. From the beginning, the emphasis was placed upon personal service instead of almsgiving, the aims being:

1. To reduce vagrancy and pauperism and ascertain their true causes.
2. To prevent indiscriminate and duplicate giving.
3. To secure the community from imposture.
4. To see that all deserving cases of destitution are properly relieved.
5. To make employment the basis of relief.

New Plan of Organization Necessary

In time it became apparent that the ward plan of organization was ineffective. It was the extreme of local self-government. Each ward, or group of wards, was to collect its own funds for relief or service within its boundaries. The ward boards were to be subordinate to the General Board, but the relation gradually became purely nominal. The result was independent relief societies in the various wards, with different standards, little co-operation and no progress. The city had grown rapidly, the population was re-distributed by rapid transit, ward associations and interests were broken, and those wards in which there was the greatest congestion of poverty were the very ones in which there was the least money for relief and the fewest possible volunteers for service. Largely on account of these conditions, the Society made no progress in its spirit, intelligence, methods of work and power for community service for several years. The decade beginning in 1900 was one of re-organization, re-vitalizing, higher standards, and a new efficiency. In fact, it was in 1900 that the Society reverted to the spirit, ideals and enthusiasm which characterized the first few years of its history.

ACHIEVEMENTS

Direct Service to the Poor

The primary object of the Society being to help needy people to help themselves, the record of achievement could best be found in the improved condition of the 623,431 families and individuals, and the 404,931 homeless people for whom the Society has performed various services during its history. The earliest reports speak of the marked improvement in the homes of the needy. Many of them responded readily to the friendly services in their behalf. Their attitude of expecting others to do for them gradually changed to one of self-endeavor and independence. A new spirit and method was at work, a large percentage of the families were rehabilitated and became self-supporting. Thousands of wage-earners have been tided over the crises of life; multitudes of mothers have had life made more enjoyable through the friendship and assistance of our visitors; at least a quarter of a million children have felt the benevolent influence and help of the Society in the formative years of their lives. Success has not always been attained. At times we have attempted the impossible. A pauper spirit sometimes becomes chronic as well as a diseased body. The family records, however, indicate that the relationship of the Society has been intelligent, sympathetic, and helpful to an important number of the city's population. There has been a generation of constructive philanthropy in Philadelphia.

Reduced Taxation

The City Controller's reports from 1867 to 1879, when the Society was started, show that the municipality expended an average of $479,099 each year for charitable purposes. This included the amount spent in public outdoor relief, which was abolished in 1879. From 1879 to 1910 the expenditures averaged $467,052 each year for the same objects. There has been an actual decrease of $12,047 for each year in the city's expenditures for charitable purposes since the Society was organized. During the same time, the population has increased 135½%. This increase has been in both the native and foreign populations, but the aliens have greatly multiplied within a generation, bringing grave social and charitable problems and making a heavy tax upon the community. Notwithstanding the growth of the city and the change in the character of the population, the expenditure of public money for charitable purposes has greatly decreased. The Society for Organizing Charity has helped to make this possible.

Education
of the Community

The educational influence of organized charity is one of its most valuable contributions to the welfare of a community. Gradually an increasing number of benevolent citizens learn that trained personal service is the most important factor in charity. Almsgiving alone will never cure poverty, but always causes its increase. John Bright said sixty-seven years ago, "If benevolence could have saved England, it would have been saved long ago." The idea of almsgiving is deep-rooted and the habit becomes tenacious, but it is injurious. The modern charity societies are practically alone in combating this idea and endeavoring to change the habit to intelligent, constructive effort. Some progress is being made. The old pet vice of indiscriminate giving is becoming unfashionable and disreputable. A flood of light has been thrown upon the causes of pauperism and a great mass of facts has been gathered for constructive methods of dealing with needy families. Social education is fundamental to the welfare of society.

The Assembly

The monthly meeting of the Assembly of the Society, which convened for a number of years for the discussion of charitable and community problems, exercised a wide influence on the social spirit of the city. Committees were appointed to make special studies of important subjects, some of which resulted in new movements. The Assembly was an open forum which brought together the community's progressive thinkers on social questions.

The Monthly Register

The Monthly Register, published for twenty years by the Society, was accepted as the official organ of the charity organization societies in twelve cities of our country. Its pages contained intelligent and illuminating discussions of social problems. It was the predecessor of "Charities," published in New York, and "The Commons," published in Chicago, which were afterwards united as "Charities and The Commons." This latter publication was succeeded by "The Survey," the present national organ of the social movement.

Co-operation

An important function of the Society for Organizing Charity is to promote co-operation among the various philanthropies of the city. The best evidence of the progress which co-operation has made in Philadelphia is seen in the development of the Bureau for the Registration and Exchange of Confidential Information. It grew out of the Bureau which was maintained by this Society for several years. It is now an independent organization, belonging to the social agencies of the city, 103 making use of its service and having on file 65,000 registrations. It promotes contacts among the philanthropies, mutual understanding and a growing social efficiency, and prevents duplication of effort and interference in service. We contribute largely to the Bureau's support and assist in its management. The social agencies of our city are rapidly learning to work together for the common good.

Legislation

A growing social consciousness and civic spirit demand advanced legislation, that the conditions of life may be improved for all, especially for the poor and neglected. The Society has used its influence to secure needed legislation, that children over two years of age should not be kept in almshouses, that deserting husbands might be punished. It has assisted in strengthening laws in regard to vagrancy, desertion, non-support and extradition. It has endeavored to protect child labor, to improve housing conditions, to secure the attendance of children at school, and to promote health and sanitary reforms. It has advocated a revision of the methods of making state appropriations to charities, in order that the state may have a just and scientific state charitable system.

Movements Encouraged

The Society has been a mother of social activities and movements. It helped to promote The School of Industrial Arts, The Public Education Association, The Free Kindergartens, The Day Nurseries, The Children's Aid Society, The Children's Bureau, The Pennsylvania Child Labor Association, The Social Workers' Club, The Training School for Social Workers, The Housing Commission, The State Conference of Charities and Corrections, and it took a leading part in bringing the National Conference of Charities and Corrections to Philadelphia in 1906, which exerted a profound influence and quickened the social consciousness of the city. The Society is a member of, and helped to organize, The American Association of Societies for Organizing Charity, the membership of which numbers now nearly 300 societies, usually called "The Associated Charities" of the various cities where located.

The Movement
International

The modern charity movement is now national—even international. All the larger American cities, as well as some Canadian and European cities, have societies founded upon the newer conceptions and ideals of charity and social service, and these societies are fast forming in the smaller municipalities. There is an exchange system, by which the facts concerning an individual or a family and the treatment which they may have received in one city, become available for their treatment in another city. The standard of work is constantly rising. By periodicals, bulletins and conferences, the experience, intelligence and skill of one society furnish instruction and inspiration for workers of other societies. More emphasis is being placed upon training as a pre-requisite for workers than ever before. Those who have been well trained in a society such as ours are eligible for all other branches of social work. Indeed, they are so much in demand that it is difficult to maintain a stable staff of workers. Not less than twenty-five who occupy responsible positions with other organizations throughout the country were trained in our Society. The experience of fifty years has been sifted and tested to find the basic principles and methods which can be employed successfully to combat poverty and misery. A scientific charity is being wrought out, which, while conserving the spirit and sympathy of vital charity, applies its power in an intelligent and constructive way. The modern charity movement is making an important contribution to a normal, rational and hopeful social re-construction.

THE PAST YEAR

The General Secretaryship

In June of 1912 the Society had lost the services of its General Secretary, Porter R. Lee, who after three years of loyal service, resigned in order to become a member of the faculty of the New York School of Philanthropy. Your Board made a thorough canvass of the country to find a man who could adequately fill so responsible a position and finally elected Riley M. Little of Pittsburgh. Mr. Little came to the Society in March of 1913, after years of valuable experience in Chicago and Pittsburgh in social work, in service to his church, and in social legislation. Already the Society has felt his influence in bringing about a broader community contact.

New Social Legislation

It was the legislative year. More bills relating to economic and social conditions were introduced in the Legislature than ever before, and several important measures became law. We were interested in several of these, assisting in their preparation and in securing their enactment.—

(a) A New Housing Code for Philadelphia was passed, which, if well administered, will have a beneficial influence upon the living conditions in our city.

(b) A Desertion or Non-Support Law was enacted, which greatly strengthens the previous legislation upon this perplexing subject. It is now possible to have a husband or father who deserts, or refuses to support his family, committed to the House of Correction at hard labor, and for each day he is confined therein, the authorities of the House of Correction must pay sixty-five cents to his family. It is hoped that men of this class will now learn that they cannot evade their natural responsibilities.

(c) An Act was passed which provides for a reformatory of the industrial type, to be located in the country, for young women between the ages of sixteen and thirty years. This institution when established will give the young women who are amenable to the law a chance for a new life, without placing them in the fatal circle of short-term commitments to the jail or House of Correction.

(d) A state institution for feeble-minded women of the child-bearing age is also to be established. This is one feature of a state-wide endeavor to deal adequately with the growing and menacing problem of feeble-mindedness. There can be no successful fight against poverty and human degradation that does not include a determined and thorough-going handling of the problem of mental deficiency.

(e) A Law was passed providing for 'The Mothers' Assistance Fund. It is popularly known as "The Mothers' Pension Act." By this Act public outdoor relief, which has been almost unknown in Philadelphia since 1879, now re-appears. We opposed the enactment of this law for the following reasons:—

1. We believed that investigation as to the need for the law should precede its enactment, and, therefore, advocated the appointment of a State Commission to make a full study of the question and report its findings to the next Legislature.

2. All the bills which were before the Legislature were imperfectly drawn and did not have adequate provisions for the administration of such a difficult and delicate task. Moreover, we believed they were unconstitutional, and would violate Article 3, Section 18, of the Constitution, and, thereby, further complicate the already confused condition of charities in Pennsylvania.

3. The stronger private charity societies have had considerable experience in pensioning mothers for several years. In view of our experience with the problem which the law seeks to solve, and remembering the past abuses of public outdoor relief, we believed that such legislation if attempted should be most carefully considered. Popular sentiment, however, supported the innovation and one of the bills became a law. It is now in process of administration. As the administration of a law is always quite as important as its written provisions, we hope that it may be beneficial to destitute mothers, that they may keep their children in their own homes during school age. We wish the law to have a fair trial, and to this end we will cordially co-operate.

State Public
Charities
Association

The Society has always been interested in the general charitable work of the state, and has advocated changes in the system of appropriations to public and private charities, and a differentiation of the functions of private, municipal, county and state charities. There is great confusion in Pennsylvania in these respects. We welcomed, therefore, the organization of a State Public Charities Association, which occurred in February of this year, and which seeks to unite the intelligent and thoughtful citizenship of the state in an endeavor to exert a wholesome influence upon the entire system of public and private charities. Our General Secretary is a member of the Board and Executive Committee.

Charities
Endorsement

The development of social agencies has resulted in the multiplication of charitable appeals, to the confusion of the contributing public. Donors are appealed to by so many different agencies that they do not know which ones to support. Our Society has made reports to its members for years concerning other charities, but, naturally, we could not pass judgment upon the merits and standard of work of all the philanthropies of the city for all contributors. A committee was organized, therefore, to promote a Charities Endorsement and Advice Committee, to become a part of a United Trades Body when it shall be established. The plan for the Committee has been approved by a group of influential business men and the executives of leading social agencies. Its operation awaits the merging of several of the leading trades bodies, which will possibly be accomplished within a few months. Such a Committee on Endorsement and Advice will be of three-fold service:

- (1) To the standard social agencies by giving them its approval after investigation.
- (2) To the contributing public by furnishing it clear and unprejudiced advice concerning the work and merits of the various philanthropies of the city which are appealing for support.
- (3) To the general public by exposing frauds and informing it about needless and duplicating agencies.

Ohio Valley Flood

In March, an unprecedented flood devastated the Ohio Valley. Cities, towns and wide stretches of the country were inundated, causing great loss of life and property. The American Red Cross was quickly in the field and summoned trained charity workers from various cities to assist in the work of rehabilitation. Two of our workers, Miss Elizabeth Wood, Supervisor of Districts, and Miss Mary Sheppard, a Superintendent, spent several weeks in Hamilton, Ohio, in this service, under the direction of the Red Cross, of which many charity societies are affiliated members.

An Appreciated Bequest

The past year brought a greatly appreciated bequest from the late William White, who left his entire estate of about $100,000 to the Society, the income to be used in its work. This generous gift was most timely and strengthened the Society when most in need. It is the largest bequest we have ever received.

Charities
Building Needed

The greatest need of the philanthropies of Philadelphia is a modern, well-equipped, rightly located United Charities Building to house the multiplied civic and social organizations which desire to work together in close contact and co-operation. For three years, The Society to Protect Children from Cruelty, The Children's Aid Society, The Children's Bureau, The Seybert Institution, The Bureau for the Registration and Exchange of Confidential Information, and The Society for Organizing Charity have occupied the buildings at 415 to 421 South Fifteenth Street. This joint occupancy of the same buildings has increased the efficiency of these organizations, and lessened the cost of operation. But the buildings are old and in many respects inconvenient, and are no longer adequate for the growing work of these agencies. Besides, there are many other philanthropies and civic organizations which would like to be adjacent to similar activities. The United Charities Building of New York is the most signal illustration of the influence and helpfulness of a United Charities Building in our country. It is to be hoped that the philanthropic spirit of Philadelphia will ere long provide a similar building for its charities.

*Emergency and interim relief only is expended from the General Fund. In addition to the above $3,024.90 the General Secretary administered the sum of $14,784.37, raised case by case and all expended for the purposes named by the individual donors whose names are given on pages 54-60. For the total relief expenditures of the Society as a whole see page 6.

†The receipts from the sale of wood, etc., at the Wayfarers' Lodges were $24,096.60 (see page 23), thus making the net cost of the care and relief of 11,925 wayfarers at our two Lodges, $12,763.08.

We have examined the above account of the expenditures of the Board of Directors of the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity, compared the vouchers on file, and find the same true and correct in every particular.

Total

Special Relief Contributions

In addition to the foregoing contributions, the Society for Organizing Charity has obtained and disbursed, as intermediary, the following sums for the relief of special cases. This does not include a large amount of relief contributed by agencies and individuals in cases where they gave directly upon the recommendation of this Society, it does not include relief procured from relatives, nor does it include money disbursed by this Society for some other charitable agency.

Acknowledgments

The Society acknowledges with thanks numerous gifts of clothing, household goods and furniture, toys, reading matter, fruit and flowers, food (including Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners), coal and wood, received at its Central and District Offices and Wayfarers' Lodges from individuals, firms, Needle-work Guilds, churches and clubs; ice tickets given to it for distribution by "The Evening Telegraph"; picnics and outings arranged for by individuals, associations and clubs.

It takes this opportunity to express also its appreciation of the ready co-operation from other social agencies, institutions, public officials and churches.

It thanks the press for the full and wide publicity given to its work by generous space in both editorial and news columns.

IN view of the frequency with which testators, inspired by a most laudable intent, but lacking in adequate knowledge as to existing needs or the best means of providing for them, direct the establishment of large charitable foundations which fail entirely, or are insufficient for the purpose intended, or duplicate work in a field already covered; and

In further view of the many existing facilities for ascertaining just what new foundations and additional equipments are required to fill gaps, arising partly from lack of money, in the prevailing system of philanthropic activity in Philadelphia:

The Society for Organizing Charity, acting in concert with other organizations in this community, takes this means of urging all persons who contemplate new endowments in any line of charitable work, to seek information as to both objects and methods from those who are experts in these matters, before committing themselves to any specific object or plan.

FOR BEQUEST OF PERSONAL PROPERTY

I give and bequeath unto the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity the sum of.....Dollars.

FOR A DEVISE OF REAL ESTATE

I give and devise unto the Philadelphia Society for Organizing Charity, its successors and assigns forever, all that certain, etc.

Contributions may be sent to
